I would like to emphasize my feeling and thoughts during my stay in Stuttgart and to summarize my experience during making my bachelor thesis.

During my stay I learnt a lot of things and gained much experience. Staying away of our families taught us how to depend on ourselves. I learnt how to face problems and deal with them without asking my parents about everything. In Egypt, life is centered in Cairo, so most students do not need to travel in order to study. This is not the case in Germany, where most of the students need to travel to study in different cities, so they gain more experience, especially, the cooking and cleaning experience.

It was a great opportunity to meet the students of the international student group Culture Connection. They taught us about Germany and we taught them about Egypt. Also, they gave us a chance to practice the German language. Also, our professors and supervisors were very cooperative and friendly with us.

Before going to Germany, I was impressed by the German system and how it is successful. I thought that the reason behind the German success is being perfect in everything. But after staying in Germany, I discovered that being successful does not need to be perfect but it needs good will and knowledge. I learnt this from the German system, it is not perfect as some people think but it depends on determination and awareness.

Also, I learnt never to believe stereotypes. Everywhere with any people, there are some bad people and other good and nice people. The same goes to Germany, I met some unfriendly people but, on the other hand, most of the people two I met were very nice, helpful and treated me in a very good manner.

The third lesson I learnt from the German people, is to make the work time completely for work and to make leisure time completely for leisure. Some people mix both times, so they lose the efficiency of work and the pleasure of leisure.

I wish I will have other opportunity to study in Germany, especially is Stuttgart because Stuttgart is a very nice city and I loved it more than any other German city.
